Explore New Heights

January 2008

Pikes Peak

What a view...
from the top of Pikes Peak.
America the beautiful indeed!

Named after Lt. Zebulon Pike who first ventured upon it's majesty, a view from Pikes Peak inspired Katherine Lee Bates to write 'America the Beautiful'. Standing 14,110 ft above sea level, Pikes Peak offers a breath-taking view of Colorado Springs with Kansas and New Mexico sitting on the horizons. Pikes Peak has been used as training grounds for the Army and Air Force, and has offer campers and climbers an adventurous time.

On our last tour in October we chanced upon unseasonal weather with 85°F at the base of the mountain and a -20°F chill factor at the summit. As we traversed the COG rail to the top, a young women from Michigan, dressed in T-shirt and shorts, donning no more than a wool blazer for an outer covering, exclaimed to me that a -20°F wind-chill was nothing, as others showed signs of hypothermia...so be prepared accordingly! Layering your clothing works best!

Situated in a very active tourist region, the area offers places of interest to satisfy most everyone's taste. Our itinerary offers three interchangeable tour groups, two levels for the physically adventurous and the third for the admirers of nature. Something for everyone is included.
